Reviewer's Comment:

Please kindly follow and conform Reference Style as guided in AIP Paper Tempate : Download Paper Template Here

REVIEWER 1:

Introduction – 2nd sentence, delete 'also'

'The strength properties of FASLG concrete specimens in 100 x 200 mm² cylinder specimens were determined by compressive strength in ' should read 'The compressive strengths of 100 x 200 mm² cylinder FASLG specimens were determined in'

Please rephrase the following sentence 'The test was completed until failure of the concrete specimens.'

The Authors are encouraged to comment on the rapid setting they observed in relation to flash setting commonly observed in Portland cement based material.

Can the Authors also comment to as why the strength of FASLG-3 is much higher from the early stage (e.g. 3 days)?

Any acknowledgements?

'SUMARRY' should read 'SUMMARY'

2nd conclusion - would the addition of slag increase or decrease the setting time??

REVIEWER 2:

Authors need to recheck (and better to calibrate) the XRF because the result seems underestimating the silica and alumina content.

The authors must also mention the source of the fly ash.

Dear Mr. Arie Wibowo,

The author could use a citation program i.e. Mendeley which is set to follow AIP style for other reference type unlisted on the guidance. The reference style of ASTM standard code is :

ASTM International, Annu. B. ASTM Stand. 4, 1 (2009).

where :

4 = volume, you can track the volume of your standard code by browsing the ASTM list of content

1 = page, check the content list

2009 = year

Therefore, you do not need to mention the code number in detail, and only write the volume, the pages, and the published year.

Best regards,
