Author comments

Dear Editor The Education and Science Journal

I have an original article that examines whether Teachers Professional Knowledge (TPK) can improve Critical Thinking (CT) and whether HOTS Literacy (HL) and Teacher Professional Development (PD) can moderate their relationship in Indonesia.

I hope my article could be accepted in The Education and Science Journal.

Sincerely

Dear Albrian Fiky Prakoso,

The verb «mediate» means «weaken» or «regulate»? You haven't answered.

... prior mediated (what?) using HL and TPD as mediator ...

I'm awfully sorry but it's very difficult for understanding(

Although TPK has influence on CT, prior mediated using HL and TPD as mediator, [CA1] [112] their relationship (TPK and CT) significantly increases after being mediated by HL and TPD. This indicates the importance of TPD in supporting CT.

[CA1]Oh, it's very difficult to understand(HL and TPD are mediators? Mediators of what? Then you write about the relationship ... Your reader should understand but it's not clear

[112]HL and TPD serve as mediator to mediate the improvement of TPK and CT

Thank you.

Best wishes,
Anna

Dear Anna
Basically, the mediation model explains how, or why, two variables are related, where a mediating variable is intermediating the relation between an independent variable, X, and an outcome, Y (Fairchild, MacKinnon, 2009). Thus, in the mediation model, it doesn't measure the effect of mediating variables on the strength and/or direction of X and Y relation.
In our article, by using mediation models, we want to measure the indirect effect of TPK on CT thru HL and TPD aside from the direct effect of TPK on CT. It can be seen from the result that both direct and indirect TPK has a significant effect on CT. Thus, the effect of TPK on CT can also be measured indirectly thru HL and TPD.
Please find attached the answer/ revised version of the paper following your prior question
